Polaroid Pop Up

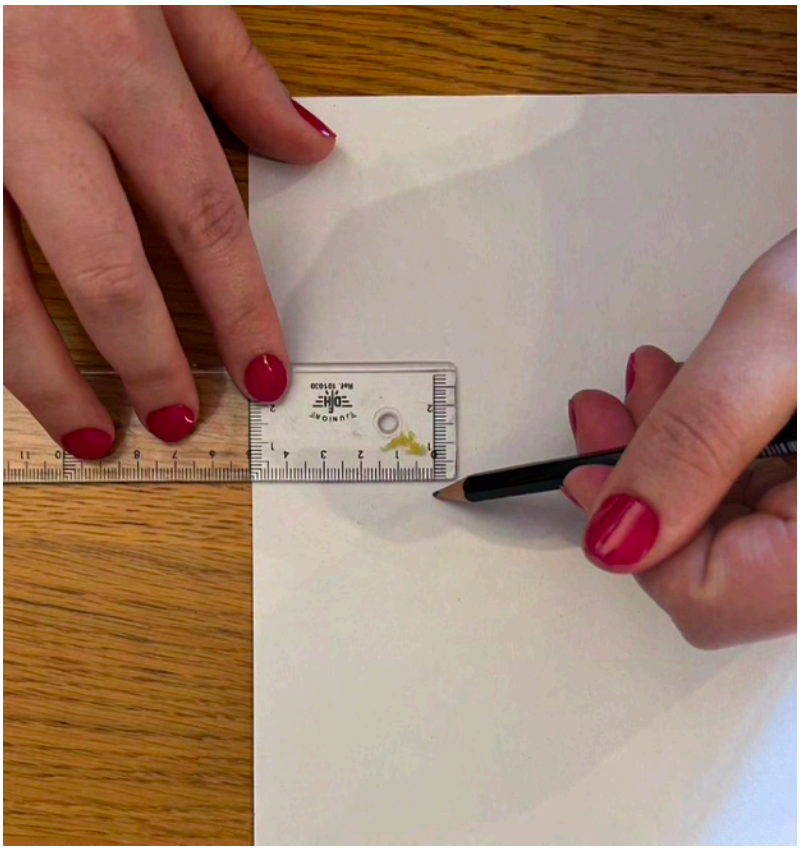

This is a fun craft to capture memories - for yourself or memories with someone else to gift them!

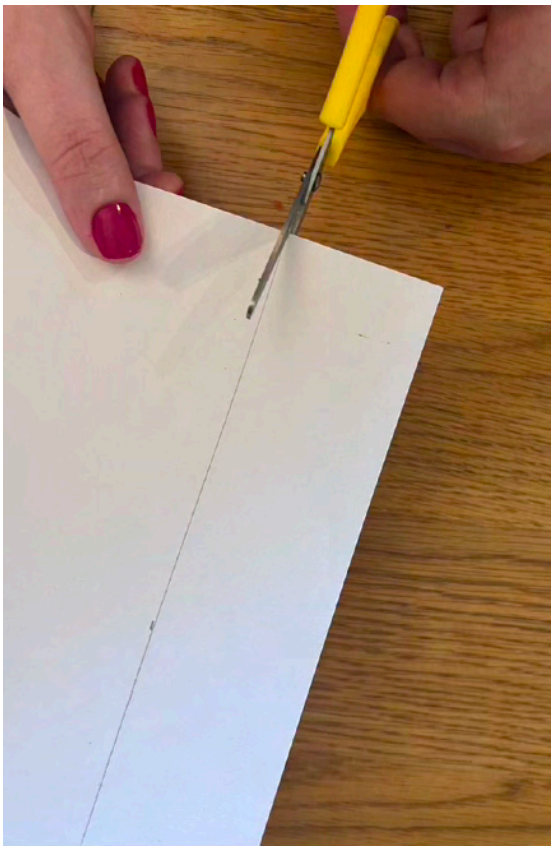

Tools and Materials:

- Paper
- Pencil
- Gluestick
- Scissors
- Ruler
- Colouring Pencils

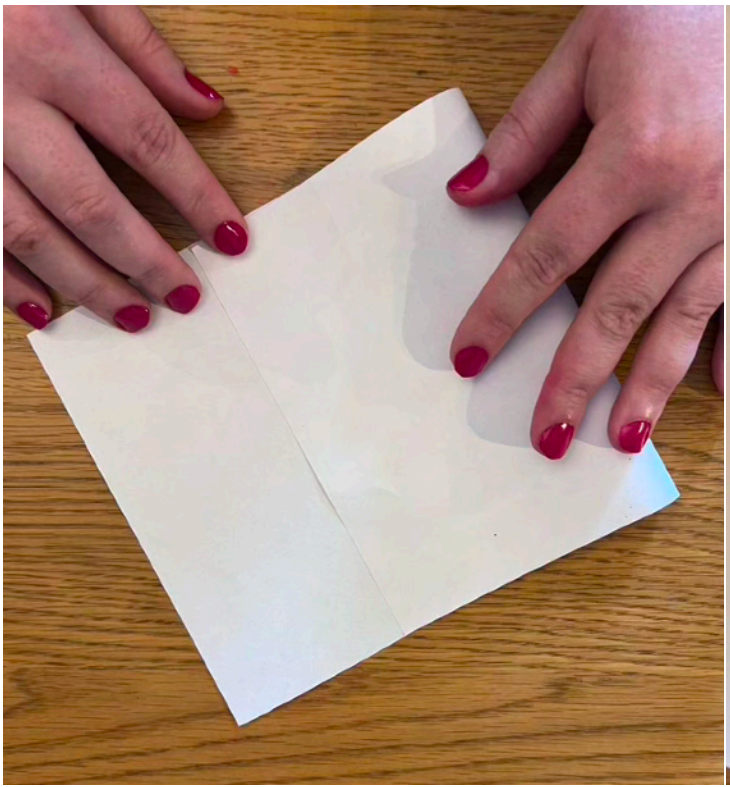

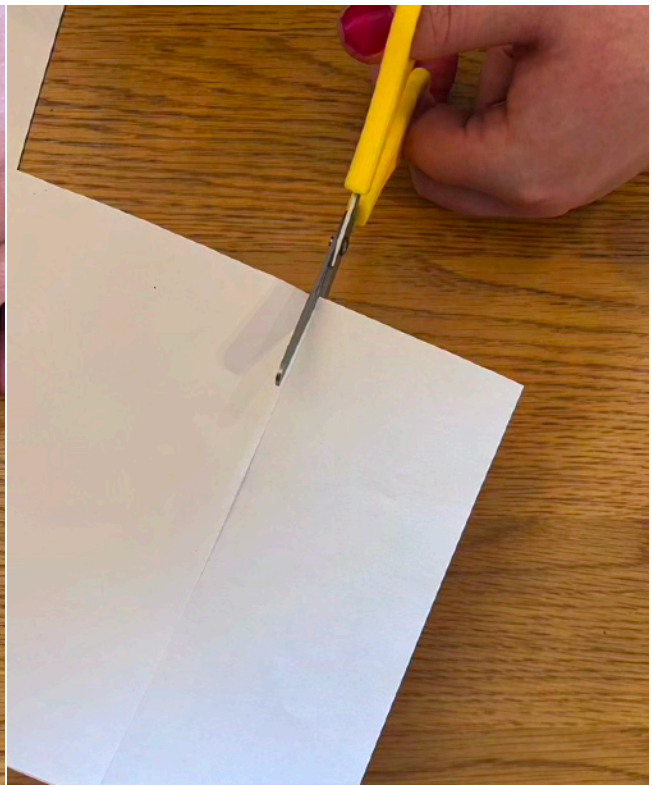

Down the long side of your piece of paper make a 5cm wide strip, measuring it out at different points to draw a straight line down then cut it off and keep for later

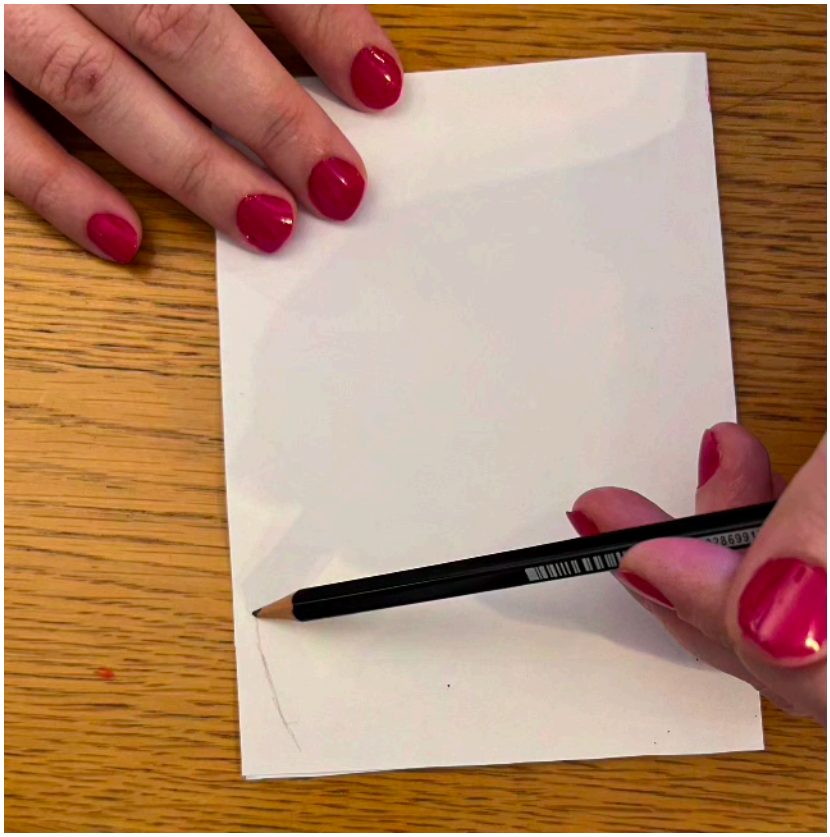

Take the large piece of paper and fold it over not in half but more the size you want your camera to be, cut off the excess if there is any like so

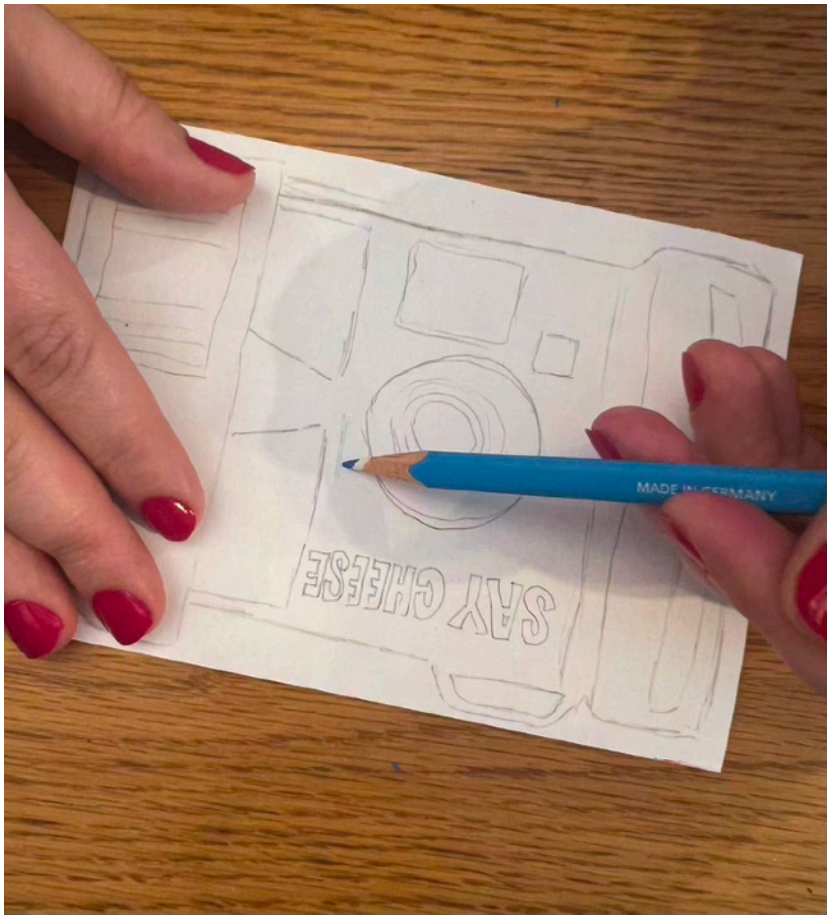

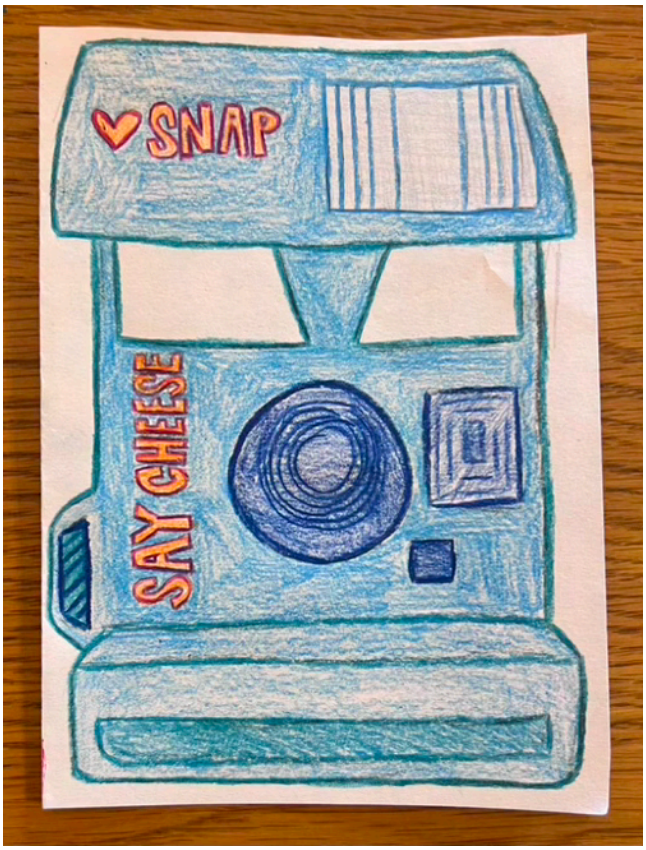

Start sketching our your camera - there are lots of different types of instant cameras you can make your own up or look online for inspiration on design! Colour it in when you are happy with it

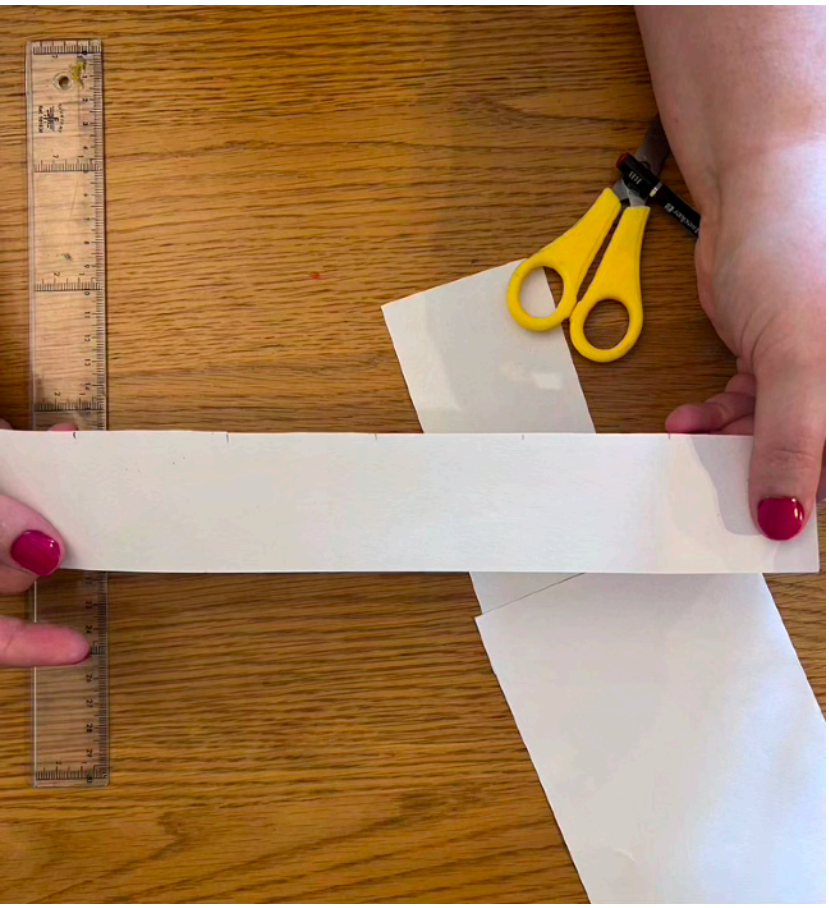

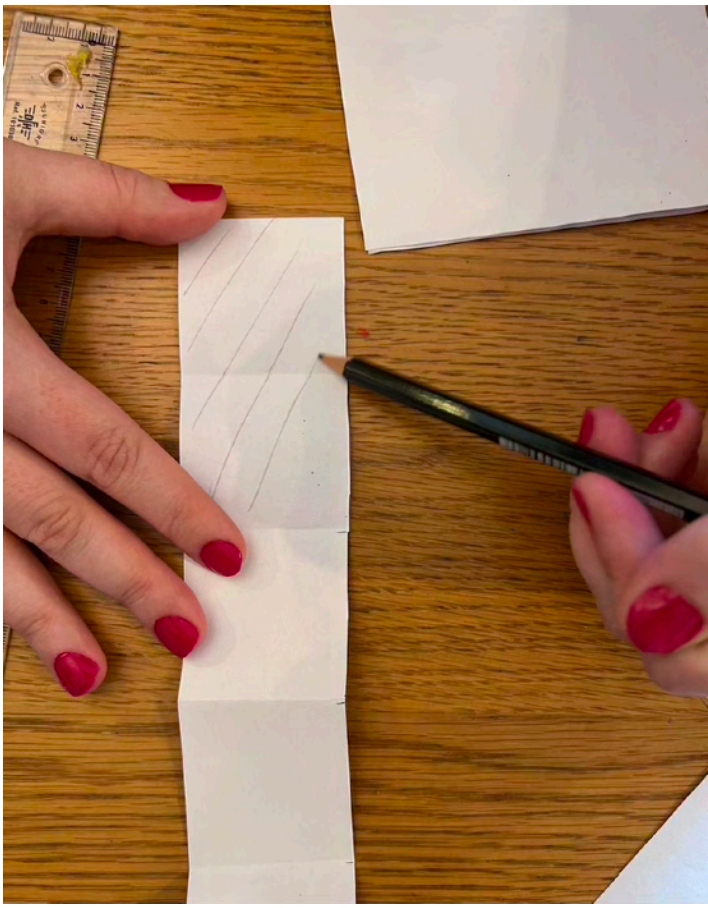

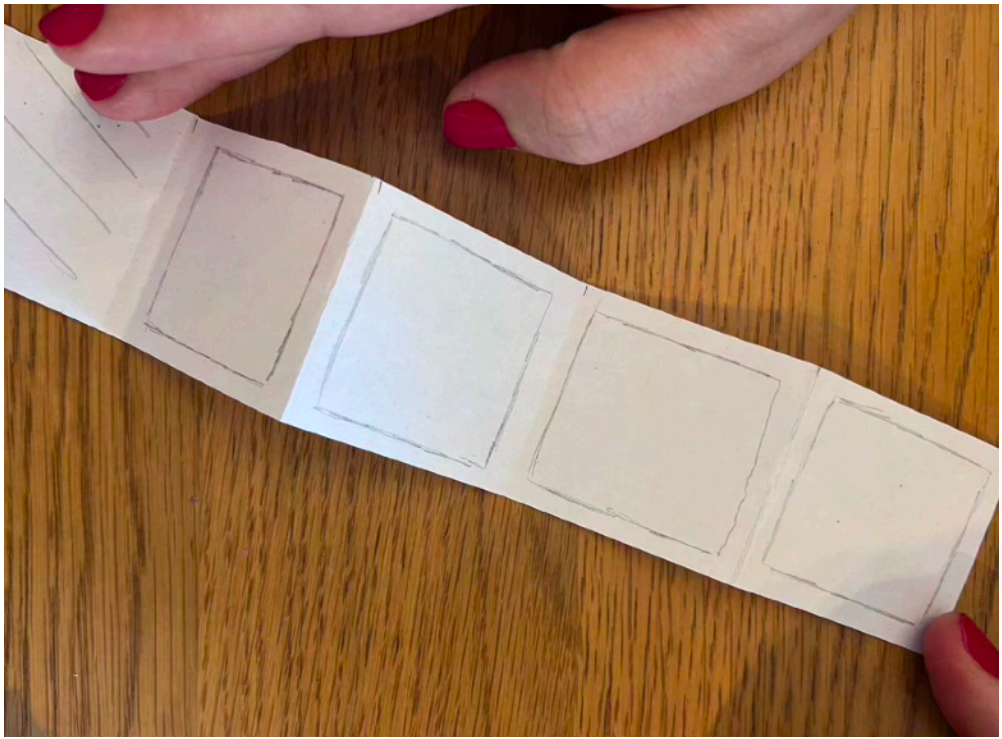

Going back to the strip you cut off at the beginning measure at 7cm intervals and then fold to create your pictures - we won't be using all of the of them to draw - used the last 2 to stick to the base

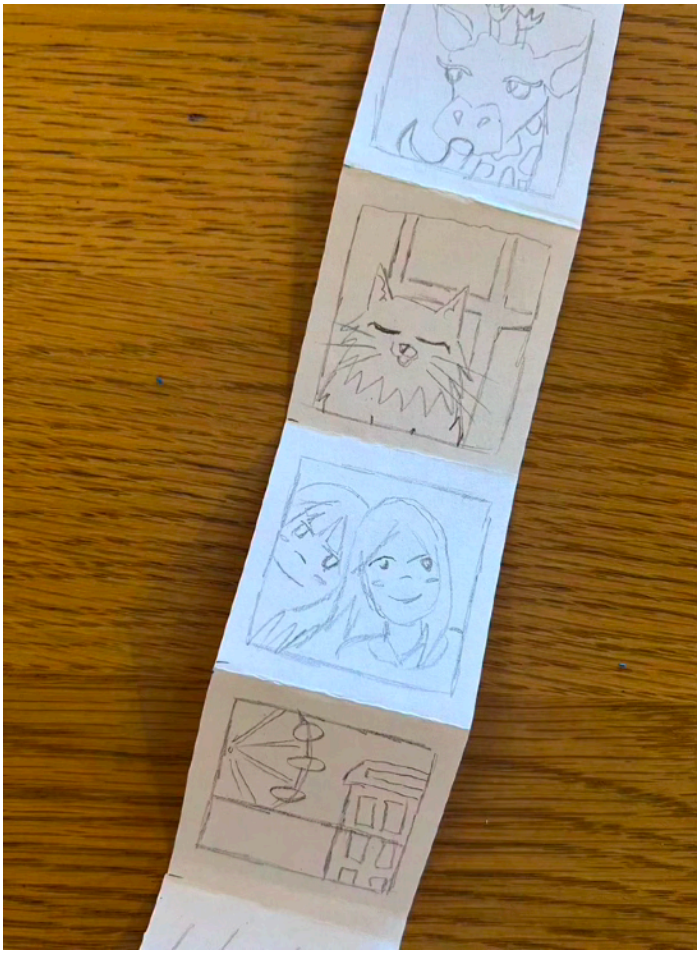

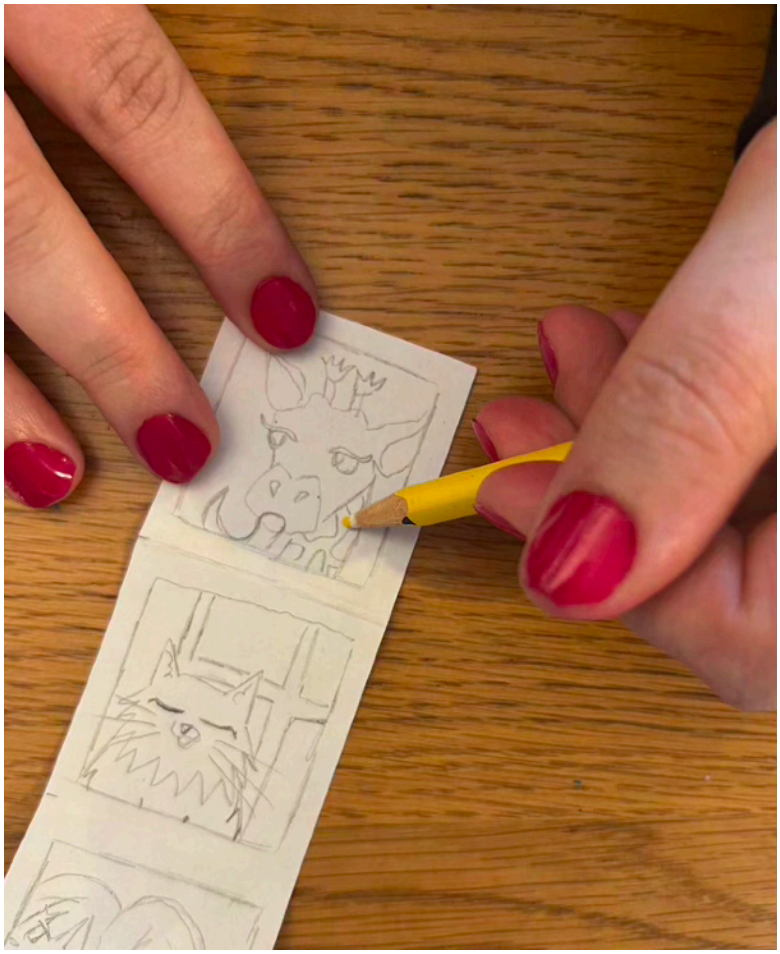

For the frames you will use sketch a border so it looks like a polaroid film like so

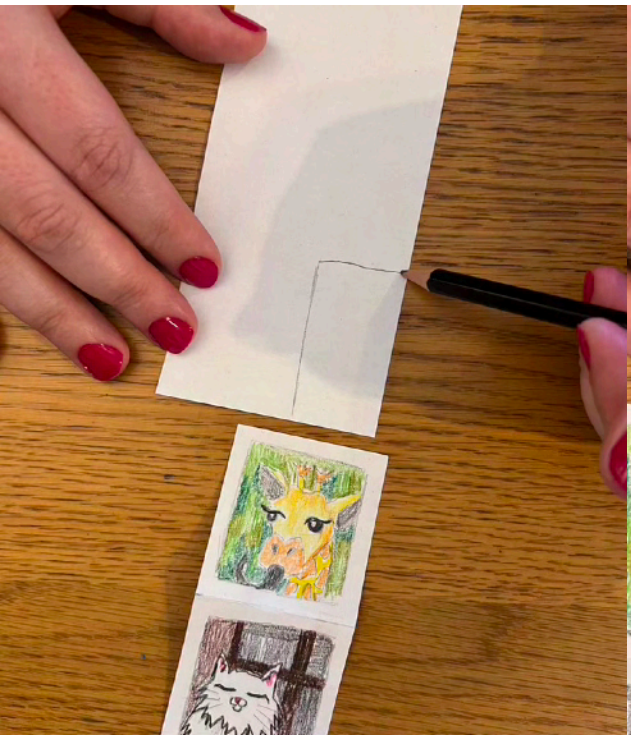

Sketch out your memories and then colour them in when happy with them

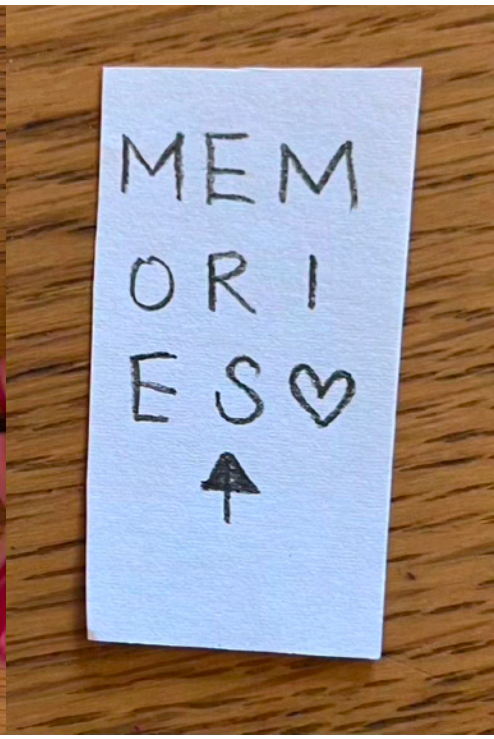

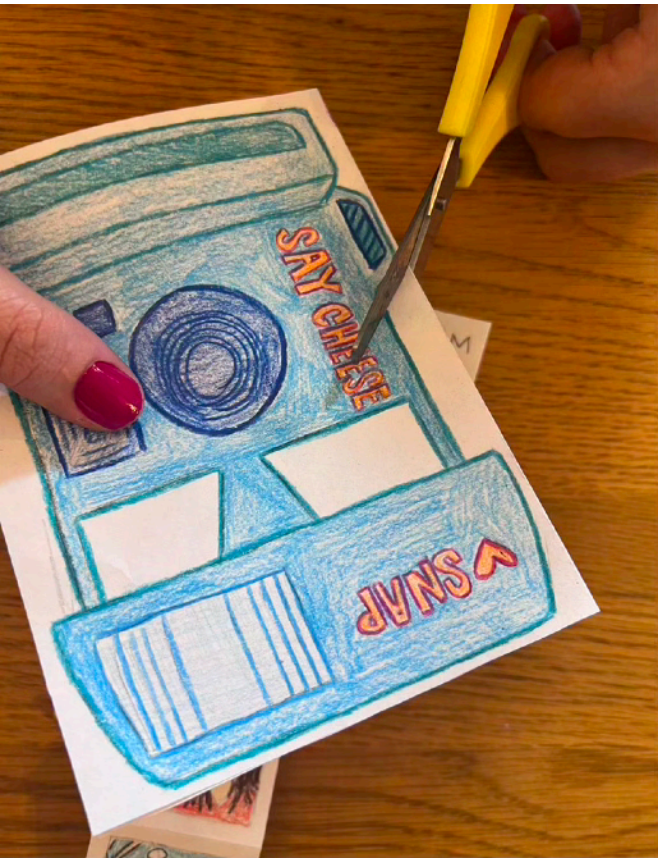

Using some of the spare paper we need to make a pull too attach to the photos so they can be pulled out

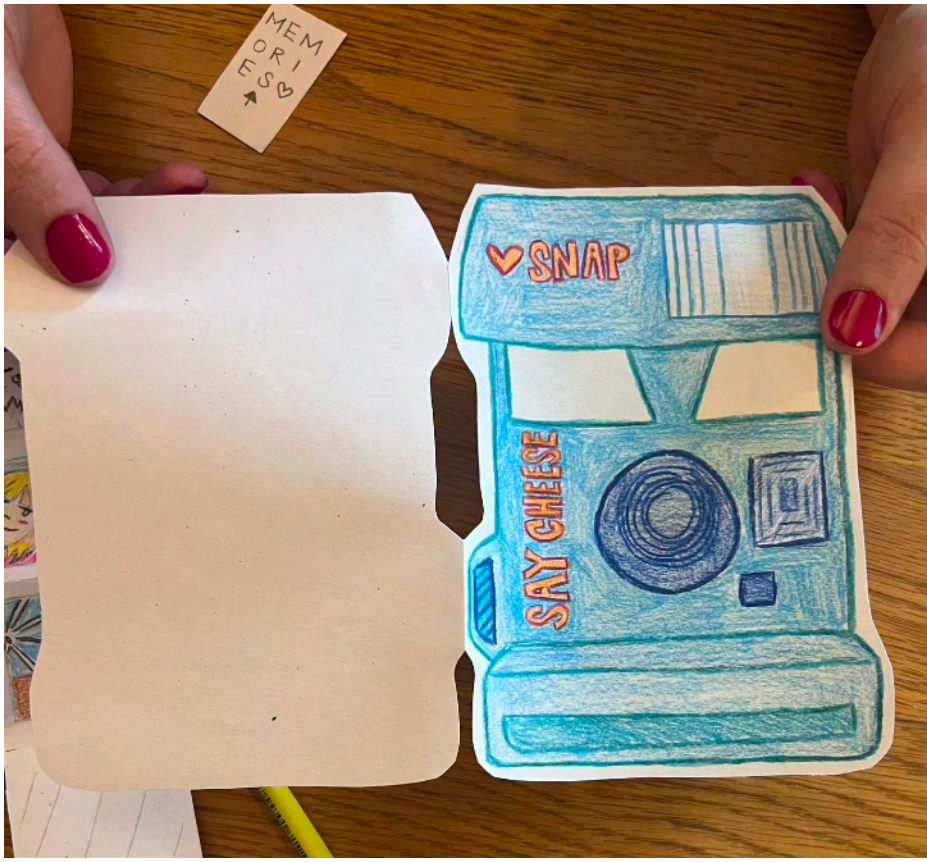

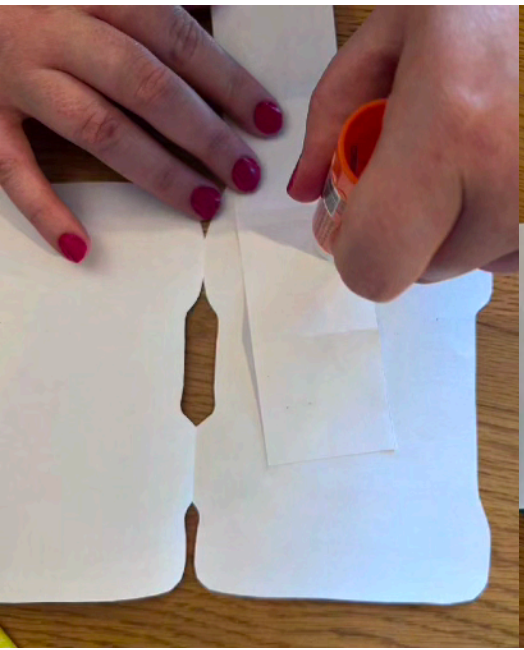

Take your camera drawing and cut out excess bits; careful not to cut too much you want both sides to stay connected like a card still

Glue the photo strip to the inside of the card you want it so the photos fold down and in with the top photo being free to be pulled from the top with the “memories” tag attached. The glue the bottom and side of the camera and push together

There you have it your very own “Polaroid Pop Up”!

Here is another we made to inspire you!
